The recent Soviet-Yugoslav talks in Belgrade represent a victory for the West. The Soviet Union was forced to hold these meetings because of its own internal difficulties. Right now, the Soviet Union has need of Yugoslavia. The elimination of Beria was not just aimed at him personally, and many of his followers still remain. Khrushchev and Bulganin, with the aid of the Soviet Army, will triumph, however. Their policy will be one of cooperation and agreement with the West. Molotov will not continue to be an important figure.
